I really enjoyed this class. It felt like we were able to learn a lot without having to do a lot of busy work. Even though I didn't particularly enjoy writing reviews of the papers, they did help solidify my understanding of what I read. It was nice to have engaging conversations during class rather than just listening to a lecture.

Dr. McCarthy treated us like adults and expected us to understand the material. Although a lot of it was hard for me to understand, he was always willing to help me work through hard parts. The class discussions and presentations also helped. Also, I found that some of the ideas we discussed in class were useful for me in solving programming problems not related to the class. In general, I think trying to understand the material at least helped me know what sorts of solutions are out there and provided different ways to think about problems.
